Re: Coronavirus / Operations Update

Dear Customers and Stakeholders,

The purpose of this update is to share information regarding our current operational status. The novel coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak remains a major concern for all of us, we continue to monitor the situation and implement proactive steps to limit disruption to delivery schedules.

Our primary concern is the health and safety of our employees, families, and partners during this crisis. Preventive measures are in place as we continue to follow the recommendations and protocols from the CDC – Centers for Disease Control, state and local governments.

Current Situation: As a designated essential business, manufacturing components for medical and military applications, our facility remains operational. Where working from home is not possible, the company is following strict guidelines for social distancing, protective gear, and intensified cleaning of the facility to protect our colleagues. We have sufficient stock in our warehouse and additional stock / materials at vendors to ensure shipments and production.

Our Partners: Our supply chain remains stable. Our suppliers have confirmed that we are not at risk of shortages, nor are any expected in the near future for any reason related to the virus outbreak.

Like you, we are unable to predict the future. However, we will continue to watch the situation and inform you if our manufacturing and delivery performance should be affected.

Our thoughts go out to our customers, partners and families during this extremely difficult and unprecedented time.

Sincerely,

Robert Kufner, President and CEO Designatronics
